Daisy The Alice Major was a remarkable horse who served with distinction in World War I. She was awarded the Dickin Medal, the animal equivalent of the Victoria Cross, for her bravery and devotion to duty. Her story is one that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.

Early Life

Daisy was born in 1912 in Ireland. She was a thoroughbred, and her sire was the famous racehorse The Tetrarch. Daisy was a beautiful horse, with a long, flowing mane and tail. She was also very intelligent and trainable.

Service in World War I

Daisy was purchased by the British Army in 1914, at the outbreak of World War I. She was trained as a dispatch horse, and she quickly proved to be a valuable asset to her unit. Daisy was used to carry messages between the front lines and the rear, often through dangerous territory.

On one occasion, Daisy was carrying a message when she was ambushed by German soldiers. She was wounded in the leg, but she refused to give up. She continued to run, even though she was in great pain, and she delivered her message safely.

Daisy's bravery and devotion to duty earned her the respect of her fellow soldiers. She was awarded the Dickin Medal in 1918, in recognition of her outstanding service.

Post-War Life

After the war, Daisy was retired from the Army and she lived out her days in a retirement home for horses. She was visited by thousands of people who wanted to see the famous war horse. Daisy died in 1933, at the age of 21.

Legacy

Daisy The Alice Major is remembered as one of the most courageous and devoted horses in history. Her story is a reminder of the unbreakable bond between humans and animals, and the sacrifices that animals have made in war. Daisy is an inspiration to us all.

Daisy The Alice Major was an extraordinary horse who served her country with distinction. She was awarded the Dickin Medal, the animal equivalent of the Victoria Cross, for her bravery and devotion to duty. Her story is one that will continue to inspire generations to come.
