The line is open to families and individuals of all ages and abilities. Participants will learn the basics of snowshoeing and winter survival, and will spend several days exploring the park's pristine forests, frozen lakes, and towering mountains.

The Journey

The Alaskan Family Snowshoe Line begins in the town of Talkeetna, Alaska. From there, participants will be transported to the park entrance, where they will meet Lemmy and the rest of the line team.

Over the next several days, participants will snowshoe through a variety of terrain, including forests, meadows, and mountain passes. They will also learn about the park's wildlife, history, and culture. Along the way, they will have the opportunity to camp under the stars, cook over a campfire, and listen to stories from Lemmy and the other line members.

The line culminates in a summit climb of Mount Healy, a 6,000-foot peak that offers stunning views of the surrounding mountains and glaciers. After reaching the summit, participants will have the opportunity to enjoy a hot meal and celebrate their accomplishment.
